Free Fire Gameplay

In a real battle royale tradition, Free Fire incorporates the elements of exploration and survival until a lone survivor emerges victorious. It is an ultimate test of endurance and straightforward, you win, or you die.

The game starts with a drop. You get airdropped into an island with the other 49 fighters. As soon as you land, you must hurry along and search for weapons and armor. As you progress into the game, you will find more equipment and ammunition which will assist you in making your kills.

Free fire has 50 players, and so you can start the game almost immediately. Because the map is smaller than other battle royale games, you will be able to make out where the other fighter is landing which gives you an edge in the game. It also makes the game more fast-paced and engaging, as opposed to hide and seek strategies needed in other games in the battle royale genres.

You must try to stay within the safe zone at all times during the game. Outside the safe area, you will sustain grievous injuries which will gradually lead to your death. However, the safe zone keeps shrinking as the fighters become less in number, making the game more challenging. It is entirely possible that you will finish the game before the safe zone closes in on you as each game session in Free Fire are no more than ten minutes.
